

Federally funded program provides free or low cost internet to qualifying Californians

by Stephen Hawkins Wednesday, April 27th 2022

CETF spokesperson Rosalinda Orozco joined FOX26 News via Zoom to talk about free or low cost internet for qualifying Californians.

FRESNO, Calif. (FOX26) — The federally funded Affordable Connectivity Program (ACP) offers a maximum $30 a month discount on high-speed home internet for qualifying households.

Affordable Internet service varies from $10-$30 a month – so after the discount is applied, home internet may be free.

The California Emerging Technology Fund is a non-profit corporation trying to get the word out about the program.

CETF spokesperson Rosalinda Orozco joined FOX26 News via Zoom to explain the program and how you can take advantage of the opportunity.

Click here for more information or to apply now.

> AFFORDABLE CONNECTIVITY PROGRAM
LOW-COST OR FREE INTERNET SERVICE

HOW TO APPLY

- 866-351-4669
- internetforallnow.org/applytoday